

THURSDAY 30TH SEPTEMBER 2021 EXCERPT

An Aussie airline could collapse, says Qantas boss

Qantas boss says Australia's aviation market isn't big enough for three major airline groups and predicts one could still perish before a full post-pandemic rebound.

.....Joyce said in an interview a big market change is the emergence of regional carrier Rex.

He believes Rex moving into jet service and launching Melbourne to Sydney flights could spark a price war.

"My personal view is that this market has never sustained three airline groups and it probably won't into the future," he said at an online Reuters event.

It could lead to the collapse of either Virgin Australia or Rex, Joyce says.

Written by Ray Montgomery, Asia Editor